I stand here time after time and I'm getting so tired. You all listen to me politely but you do not hear a single word I say. What I am actually talking about is the End of the World... the deaths of our children and grandchildren, yours as well as mine. No more summers, no more trees or flowers, animals or birds - everything that makes the world so beautiful; no more music or poetry or literature or art... all gone - and all you seem to be interested in is whether or not I cut the outer covering of one piece of wire at Capenhurst. Of course I did. You know I did. How else can I get through to you?

Patricia Pulham

From a statement to the court at one of her trials for criminal damage during the Snowball campaign in the mid-1980s.
